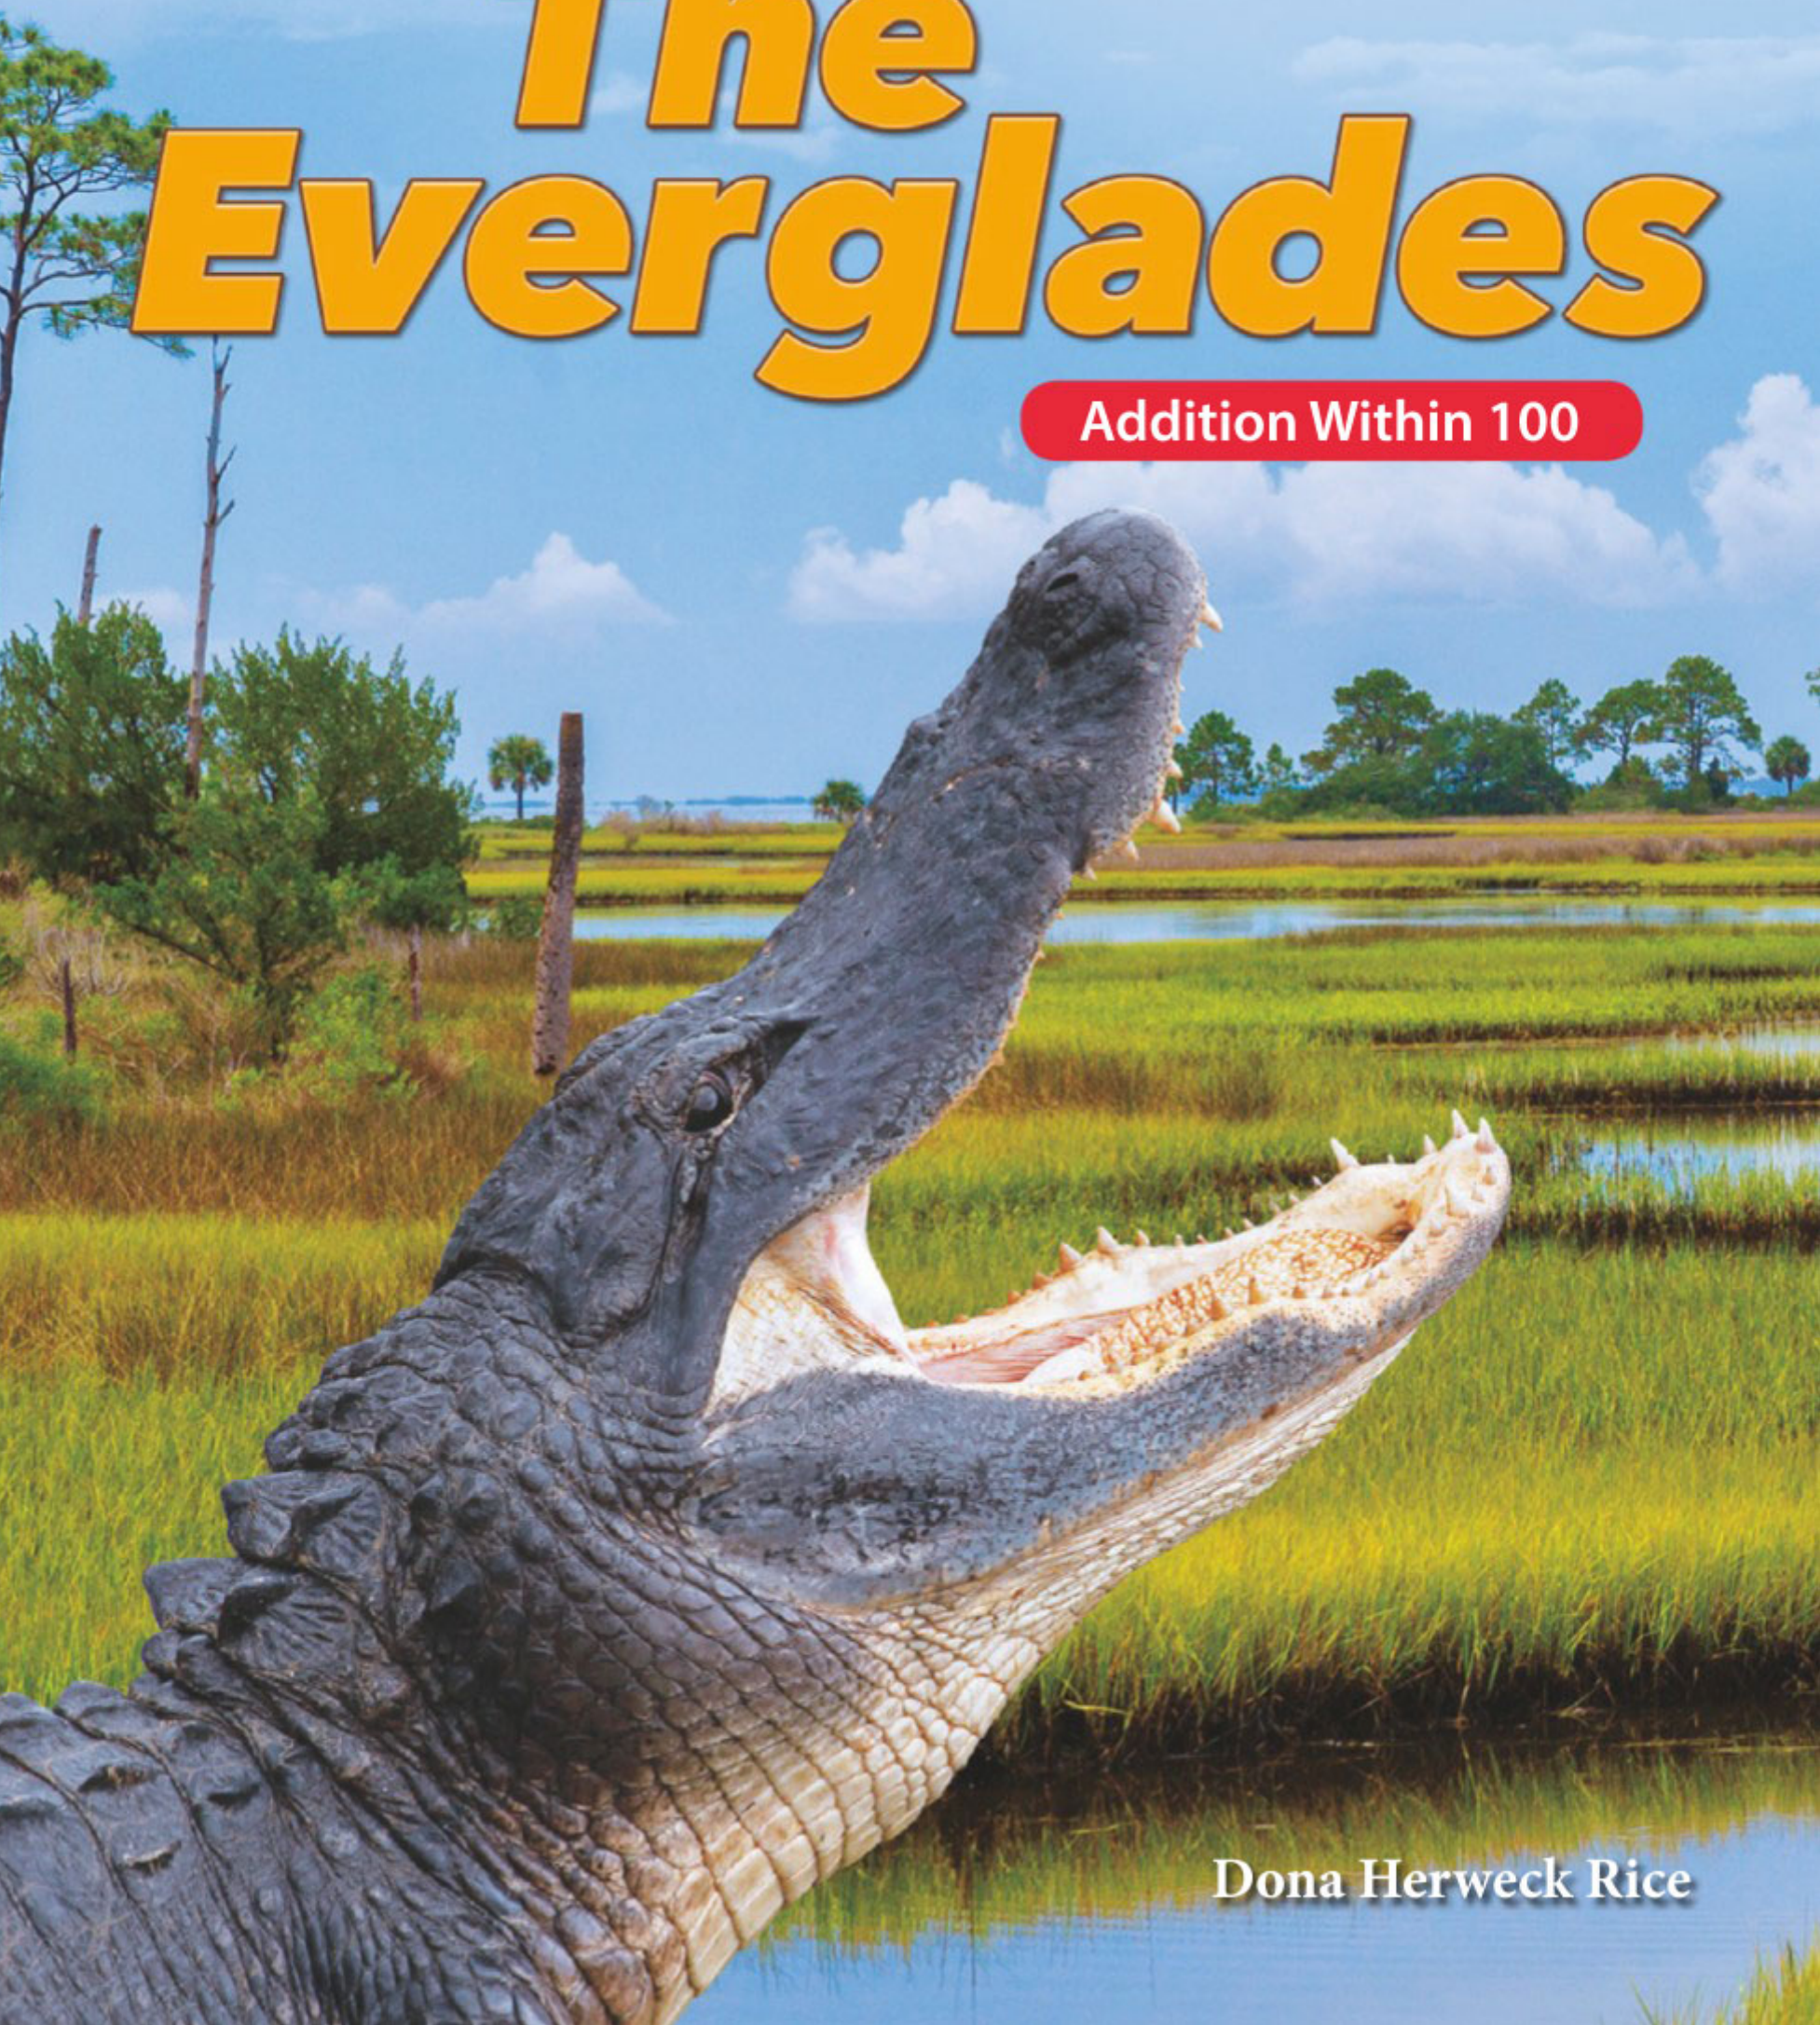
The Everglades

Addition Within 100



Dona Herweck Rice

Oh, Snap!

Look! Two bright eyes glide across the green water as you watch from an airboat. Closer, closer they come. The animal swims quietly. If you did not see the eyes, you would not know it was there. Suddenly, a long, gray-green snout appears. The jaw opens wide, and you see rows of sharp, pointed teeth. Snap! The jaw closes fast. The crocodile has caught its prey.

Everglades National Park

Here in Everglades National Park, crocodiles roam free. This is their home. It is home to many other kinds of animals, too. Birds and fish live here. Mammals play, and reptiles soak up the sun. People come here, too. They come to see the wildlife. They come to see the wild place the animals call home.
