Lift Every Voice

From a young age, John Lewis had a strong sense of right and wrong. He believed everyone should be treated with respect. In the presence of injustice, he refused to stay silent. In fact, he felt it was his duty to speak up and get in the way. Lewis often got in trouble for standing up for his values. But he did not back down. He had a vision for a better world. He was set on making it come true.

John Lewis, civil rights activist, age 22
