Born in Paradise

Once upon a time
A little girl opened her eyes
Ow! She saw her mother
Lying her side
A woman so beautiful
A woman of her life

Draped in linen, so fine cuddling her day and night an angel, brought her into a light light of surety, a home to abide for her she may be a princess for daddy she may be some divine but destiny is pre-defined princess has to leave before time

*Why? asked from chaste eyes
A wish, could play longer tonight
Wholehearted, she deeply broken inside
Mamma, hold me so tight
Don't let me, away from your sight
Do you feel, how anguish this might?
She may go alright, her heart forever lying in your side
What left was not her anymore
Every crack in her bone
Sinking deep down to her throat
You could have stopped, the wrong
Not her age to take this storm!*

Princess no more Princess

*Things got changed
Paradise turned to stoned cage
Cold, frozen in and out
No affection, no warmth day goes up, night goes down
I don't belong here & shout
Just pull me out
Just pull me out
In every sleep she bowed
All she wants a nap on her mother's lap
No matter how loud
All deaf, words drowned*

Some Days

*She was naughty
Like a child be
But that doesn't fit around
She is not mine
She is not mine
Doesn't belong to any how.*

*Who will ask? Why chose her?
An exchange for a piece of land
why plucked from the root
What happened too fast
A commitment of passion doesn't last
No one felt to cuddle
The way her mother
No space to hide
She was just five!*

*An asset to keep in safe
Detached, unconnected, hollow and faked*

*How tough, this for a child
Wailing nights, days to fight
Waiting for summer to arrive
The only time to felt alive*

*Summer arrived, OH! My lost paradise
Such a glorious, cheerful sunrise
With open wings, flying entire site minding her mommy, in offered time filled in memories, to cherish when lone
A diary to note, few dates of delight!*

*Summer ended!
Back to impound
Eyes swollen, flooding through out
Dripping couldn't stop, long gone the felicity
Forgotten, silence in sound
Neither had a beat to sense ache!*
