Dedicated to My World

Ms. NAVYASHEELA
(MS - Finance - UK)

The Pain of Losing a Sisterly Hug. Her arms were home's gentle harbor, playful yet profound—teasing away sorrows with a squeeze and a giggle. She knew my flaws, loved them fiercely, her embrace a bridge over lonely rivers. Without it, festivals feel empty, whispers of advice echo unanswered; I miss that sisterly hug that promised, 'You're never alone in this chaos.'

The family reeled, clinging tighter. But fate was merciless. In 2021, the pandemic swept through like a thief in the night. Raj's elder brother, the strong one who had shouldered burdens since boyhood, fell to COVID's ruthless grip. Ventilators hummed in vain; he was gone, leaving behind a wife and children, and Raj adrift without his brother's steady presence the one who'd wrestled with him in the yard, taught him resilience.
