THE COMPETITORS

Who rules the jungle? It is easy to choose gorillas. They are the largest primates. The powerful giants are also unbelievably smart.

A close-up photograph of a leopard with its mouth wide open, showing its teeth and tongue. The leopard is looking directly at the camera with a fierce expression. The background is a blurred savanna landscape with green grass and a blue sky. A black text box is overlaid on the top left of the image.

But gorillas may have met their match in leopards. These graceful big cats are some of the fiercest hunters in the wild. It is an epic battle when these two animals face off!

Gorillas have sturdy bodies with wide chests and human-like hands. The beasts mostly use their long arms to walk on all fours. But they can stand when they have to.

Gorillas are found in the thick rain forests of Africa. The apes usually live in groups of up to 30. They can eat around 40 pounds (18.1 kilograms) of food per day!
