A LONG RIDE

February 19, 2012 is a snowy morning near Craig, Colorado. Teenagers Justin McAlexander and Jesse and Mason Burke are going snowmobiling in the mountains. They gather supplies and set off.

Soon, they encounter deep powder. Their snowmobiles begin to sink! The boys dig out their sleds, but they keep getting stuck. Justin calls for help on a cell phone. They are stranded for the night.

A photograph of two snowmobilers riding through a snowy forest. The snowmobilers are wearing helmets and winter gear. The snow is falling around them, creating a misty atmosphere. The snowmobilers are riding towards the camera, with the one in the foreground slightly ahead of the other. The background shows snow-covered evergreen trees.

"I knew we were going to stay out there so I might as well make the best of it and get ready."
-Jesse Burke

*"Dig a pit, collect more firewood, and keep the fire going. And wait, don't move, stay put."
-Justin McAlexander*

They dig a pit and cover it with a blanket for shelter. Mason collects dry wood for a fire. Soon, a blizzard forms.

They spend the night trying to stay warm. When they run out of wood, they use fuel from a snowmobile. Rescuers find them in the morning. One boy has frostbite on his foot. But they survived the blizzard!
