It had been a long journey. She was almost there. Her senses guided her, forces pulled her and the ocean currents carried her to the beach where she was meant to return. She swam with speed along the seabed, and as each wave rolled overhead, she started to remember.

A vibrant, artistic illustration of a sea turtle resting on a sandy beach. The turtle's shell is a mix of brown, pink, and purple with white speckles. Its head and flippers are also decorated with purple, blue, and white patterns. The background shows a bright, sunny sky and a blue ocean with white-capped waves crashing onto the shore. The overall style is painterly and whimsical.

So long ago she followed the moonlight with the rest of them. Her fellow hatchlings were so small. And so was she.

Each crashing wave was giant, but they were fearless. Their path was already drawn and the sea awaiting.

Now she was back to her birthplace. She crawled toward the dunes and nestled in the sand. Soon to lay the sea's little treasures.
