Chapter 1: The New Dawn

3 December 2020, Bangalore

The expanse of the sky clouded with mist and rain drops that no more fell perpendicular to the land magnified the beauty of the rays of sun piercing through the clouds from my balcony. Its 6 am on a Thursday morning and my entire family was getting ready to begin their daily routine of yoga and meditations. My home looked very refreshing and alive at this hour of time which perhaps was never the case few months ago. This house we lived in was never a home for us rather we were all scattered by our work, stress of performance at work, lack of time, unbalanced & unhealthy lifestyle and most importantly divided by phones even though we lived in the same house. Very clearly the new dawn had embarked on us!

About a year ago there was news of a rare contagious virus that succumbed people to death in Wuhan city of Hubei province in China. I remember how every one of us continued our life reading and watching the news in Wuhan. Obviously, it was some other country miles away and why any of us should really bother as long as it's not us! The human mindset works on the basis of securing itself first. Far away from the core of epidemic, it was like watching a thriller movie. The virus was zoonotic and closely related to Bat, Pangolin & SARS corona viruses which caused pneumonia and acute respiratory distress syndrome.

Many scientists & researchers of course from rest of the world joined the bandwagon to find the root cause of this contagious virus but little did they know that they were dealing with something that would break war against humanity. In matter of few weeks when the world was celebrating new year this virus took a new turn and started spreading to more countries taking many lives and left many thousands impacted. The year 2020 began with a dreadful attack of an alien virus and in no time what appeared to be an epidemic was declared as Pandemic by the World Health Organization.

We all grew up watching movies like Independence Day, Armageddon, where humanity battled a war against the giant aliens. Little did we know that one day humanity will wage a war against an alien in real, only difference was that instead of a gigantic alien that invaded the earth with weapons of mass destruction, we dealt with an alien microscopic virus which could not be seen or felt until it infected the body of a human. The alien virus which was now named as Covid-19 used our body, our mind, our fears and our weakness as its weapon of mass destruction.
